F. Conflicts of Interest

A “conflict of interest” for this purpose occurs when a person’s private interest interferes, or even appears to interfere, with the interests of the company. You may have a conflict of interest if you are involved in any activity that prevents you from performing your duties to the company properly, or that may create a situation that could affect your ability to act objectively, effectively and in the best interests of the company. Accordingly, you must place the company’s interest in any business matter ahead of any personal interest. Remember that the company’s interest includes the company’s obligations to its clients.

The Directors and the Senior Management must avoid conflicts of interest. The Directors and the Senior Management should also be mindful of, and seek to avoid, conducts which could reasonably be construed as creating an appearance of a conflict of interest. While the Directors and the Senior Management should be free to make personal investments and enjoy social relations and normal business courtesies, they must not have any interests that adversely influence the performance of their duties, functions and responsibilities as the Director and the Senior Management of the Company. A conflict of interest can arise when improper personal benefits accrue to the Director or the Senior Management or a member of his/her immediate family as a result of his/her position as the Director or the Senior Management. A conflict situation can also arise when the Director or the Senior Management takes an action or has an interest that may make it difficult for him or her to perform his or her duties, functions and responsibilities objectively and effectively.

While the Code does not attempt, and indeed it would not be possible, to describe all conceivable conflicts of interest that could develop, the following are some examples of situations which may constitute conflicts of interest:

1. Working, in any capacity, for a competitor, customer, supplier or other third party while occupying the position of the Director or the Senior Management;
2. Competing with the Company for the purchase or sale of property, products, services or other interests;
3. Directing business to a supplier owned or managed by, or which employs, a relative or friend;
4. Receiving loans or guarantees of obligations as a result of one's position as the Director or the Senior Management;
5. Accepting bribes, kickbacks or any other improper payments for services relating to the conduct of the business of the Company; and
6. Accepting, or having a member of the Director's or the Senior Management's family accept, a gift from persons or entities that deal with the Company, where the gift is being made in order to influence the Director's or Senior Management's actions as a member of the Board or Senior Management, or where acceptance of a gift could otherwise reasonably create the appearance of a conflict of interest.

A conflict of interest may not always be clear. The best way to judge whether you may have a conflict of interest is to ask yourself whether a well-informed person would reasonably conclude that your interest could in any way influence your decision or performance in carrying out a duty on behalf of the company. To avoid conflicts of interest, identify potential conflicts when they arise and contact Internal Legal Head if you are unsure whether a conflict exists. In addition, if you become aware of any conflict or potential conflict of another employee, you should consult with Internal Legal Head. Therefore, the Directors or the Senior Management must promptly bring any question about his or her actual or potential conflict of interest with the Company to the attention of the chairman of the Board or the compliance officer, who will then review the question and determine a proper course of action, including whether consideration or action by the full Board is necessary.

Do not take corporate opportunities as your own personal opportunities. You are prohibited from taking personal advantage of a business or investment opportunity that you become aware of through your work at The Company. You owe a duty to the company to advance its interests when the opportunity arises, and you must not compete with the company in any way

The Directors or the Senior Management involved in any conflict or potential conflict situations shall disclose such conflict or potential conflict to the Board and recuse themselves from any discussion or decision relating thereto.
